

This event is for newcomers as well as aficionados of glia and/or energy metabolism. The purpose is networking, which will be facilitated by a dram or two of Scotland's national drink and views of the University of Glasgow's stunning Gilmorehill campus. The university is the fourth-oldest in the English-speaking world and one of Scotland's four ancient universities. We'll begin with a walk through Kelvingrove park, past the Kelvingrove museum and art gallery, then take a tour of Glasgow University's campus and finish off with whisky tasting (soft drinks will also be available). We can accommodate approximately 40 individuals. The event is on the same day as the symposium on 'Neuron-glia metabolic coupling'.
